

Plant a Money Tree

by Brent Evans <http://www.learningsuccess.com>

It is important for your security and quality of life to have several streams of income. As such, there are important principles to assure your success. The first letter of each principle is underlined and when put together forms the acronym: DRAW MONEY TREE. The first four principles are to be found within you. The others need to be evident in any opportunity you are evaluating.

	Important	Understand	Started	Habit
0					Decision to Be Wealthy: Until you decide to be wealthy you will not notice, discover, or take action on the wealth opportunities around you.
1					Responsible (committed): Don't keep moving the money tree. Wealth building requires a series of actions taken over a period of time.
2					Achieve Ever Greater Means by living at least 10% below your means: Learn to live below your means and your means will grow to higher and higher levels.
3					Win in the Margins & Take the millionaire's minutes: Look for opportunities around you to get more for your money and build additional streams of income.
4					Multiple Streams of Income: Will the opportunity you are evaluating add another stream of income and enrich your quality of life?
5					Outstanding: Is the company, product, or service well above others in the field?
6					Nothing Down: Can you take advantage of this opportunity with little or no money investment?
7					Employee Resistant: Having employees is expensive and time-consuming. Does this opportunity require employees?
8					Yield: What is the long-term income potential in relation to the time needed to take advantage of the opportunity?
9					Trends – Timing - Tested: Does this opportunity take advantage of important trends, such as more and more public interest. Has it been tested?
10					Residual: Does this opportunity include building an income that continues and is not dependent on your continued work?
11					Essential to Everybody Everyday: Does the opportunity involve products or services that are essential to everyone every day?
12					Enthusiasm: Is the product, services, or opportunity capable of generating enthusiasm? Will you and other people want to share it with others?

Rolling to Plant Your Own Money Tree

Each player should have his or her own game sheet with 13 principles or actions important when planting money trees that can generate additional streams of income. They are numbered from 0 thru 12. Each principle/action row has four squares labeled: Important – Understand – Started – Habit. When a player claims a principle/action (see below), he or she should indicate this by marking one of the squares in that row that would correctly identify how the player is doing in implementing that particular principle/action. If he or she agrees it is important, the Important box should be marked. If player fully understands the principle/action and how to implement it, the Understand box should be marked. If the player has actually started the action, the Started box should be marked. If the player has made it a habit to implement the principle/action as shown by consistently doing it for at least two consecutive weeks, the Habit box should be marked. This allows the game sheet to be an on-going program and progress sheet for the player. On a turn, player rolls dice and by adding or subtracting them comes up with a number that allows him or her to claim a particular principle or action. For example, player could roll a 5 and a 2. That means player could add the dice and claim #7 (Employee Resistant) or subtract the dice and claim #3 (Win in the Margins). First player to claim all 13 principles or actions wins the game. Next time the game is played, players could discuss progress made from the last time in implementing the principles/actions and the benefits they have experienced. A successful player should be able to use the acronym DRAW MONEY TREE to recall and explain all 13 principles. Players need to be able to apply the first four principles to develop the qualities within themselves to become wealthy. They need to know the other nine principles so they can evaluate wealth-building opportunities that become available.
